

Sizing and fit guide:

Nappy covers should fit snug around babies waist and legs. If the cover is too loose, it may leak. Our covers provide plenty of stretch and flexibility, and when fitted correctly, should not leave marks on babies skin.

It is best to follow the measurements provided, as the weight ranges are approximate only. If you are using our covers over a fitted nappy, measure over nappy while it is on your baby, to ensure that the cover will fit the extra width at the waist etc.

Generally speaking our covers provide a generous fit, due to their adjustability and stretch. The small size fits most newborns, and will last many months after that also, usually between 6-12 months of age. The medium size can last some toddlers until toilet training. Taller/older toddlers may move onto the large size, but many will not need to.
